More than half of acute trusts are failing to reduce their use of antibiotics
More than half of acute trusts in England failed to reduce their antibiotic use between 2017/2018 and 2018/2019, according to figures analysed by The Pharmaceutical Journal.

Assessing environmental impact of medicines financially ‘catastrophic’ for pharmaceutical industry
Assessing the environmental risks of a new medicine as part of the risk-benefit assessment during market authorisation would be “catastrophic” for the pharmaceutical industry, an environmental scientist from manufacturer AstraZeneca has said.

Secrets of success: the hospitals slashing their antibiotic use
Despite the rise of resistant infections, national figures show that antibiotic use continues to grow in hospitals. However, some trusts... in England are stepping up their stewardship efforts and achieving significant reductions. Here, three trusts share the secrets to their success.

Flu vaccination in pregnancy found to be effective in immunising babies
Having a flu vaccination during pregnancy helps to prevent infection and admission to hospital in babies, a study funded by Public Health England has found.

Social care should be considered when deciding where pharmacies are sited, says RPS Wales
Pharmaceutical needs assessments in Wales should include an assessment of local populations’ social care requirements, the Royal Pharmaceutical Society in Wales has said.

SNP manifesto calls for devolution of the Misuse of Drugs Act
The Scottish National Party’s 2019 general election manifesto calls for the devolution of the Misuse of Drugs Act, to allow Scotland to undertake “the full range of effective public health measures” to address drug addiction and prevent drug-related deaths.

Celebrating 70 years of the BNF
The Royal Pharmaceutical Society library celebrates the British National Formulary’s 70th anniversary.

Regan McCahill: ‘The mental health of students is of the utmost importance’
Regan McCahill, president of the British Pharmaceutical Students’ Association, on how her organisation will support newly qualified pharmacists in 2020.

Why having a mentor is so important to pharmacists working in general practice
New general practice pharmacists can feel isolated, but mentorship can boost their resilience and the care they give patients, says clinical pharmacist Niketa Dass.

Call for ‘independent pharmacist’ voice on apprenticeship proposals
The Pharmacists’ Defence Association and the Guild of Healthcare Pharmacists have warned that the voice of “independent pharmacists” has not been included in revamped plans to develop a pharmacy degree apprenticeship.
