Why 16:00 and not midnight

Generally, the assessment deadlines are structured so that (if you tend to work to the deadlines) you do not end up working until, say midnight. The goal is to try and help you maintain a reasonable work-life balance.

Late work

The way tasks are scheduled means that there is little wiggle room for late assignments. E.g., If you do not get your CV in on time, Friday, then there may not be a chance for it to be considered when the teams are formed first thing Monday. This could result in you not being placed in a team. Likewise, if you are late with a learning journal, one consequence is that no-one will be allocated to provide you feedback on it, and you will not be allocated any learning journals on which to provide. That may cost you marks.
